ANTI-RACIST/BIAS STATEMENT

The School of Theatre acknowledges the mistakes we have made dealing with systemic racism, bias, and prejudice, much like the rest of America. We wholeheartedly believe in the following words of Ibram X. Kendi: “The opposite of racist isn’t ‘not racist.’ It is anti-racist.” To the School of Theatre, this means that we will educate our faculty, staff, and students about anti-racist practices. This looks like creating systemic change through workshops, continuing education, and professional development centered around anti-racist practices, theatrical intimacy, and bettering ourselves in service of our diverse and intersectional student body. This feels like educating and empowering our students, faculty, and staff to recognize and speak out against racism and damaging, outdated theatre practices. We are committed to this daily practice of unlearning, growth, and change.

FRAME/WORKS

Please join us for a The Lightning Thief Frame/Works discussion on Monday, Apr. 29 at 7:00 p.m. in person or via Teams. Frame/Works is intended to share the contextual underpinnings of our theatrical productions – the how, the who, the what, the when and the why. Frame/Works brings to light the important conversations that are often had before, during, and after a piece of theatre is created and shared. Teams meeting information is available at www.uncgtheatre.com. To attend in person, please visit room 130 in the Moore Nursing Building located at 318 Mclver St.

Equal parts whimsical adventure, family drama (whether about family of origin or found family), and coming-of-age story, The Lightning Thief: The Percy Jackson Musical has a long history. A very long history if you consider that the plot action is based on the ancient Greek myths about the hero demi-god Perseus, whose origins date back to the 8th century BCE. Created by Rob Rokicki and Joe Tracz, this show’s contemporary inspiration is Rick Riordan’s 2005 book, The Lightning Thief – the first in what is now a series of six young adult novels.

Riordan conceived of Percy’s story as a means of inspiring his young son who, with ADHD and dyslexia, struggled to read but found Greek mythology fascinating. So, love was the impulse behind the creation of the Percy Jackson story, and a lot of love has been brought to the process of mounting this UNCG production. From the creative team to the cast and crew, I’ve seen a lot of love – for the play, for the art form, and for one another – informing the work. Everyone has been wonderfully committed to telling this story.

I believe we tell and consume stories (whether in the form of a book, a song, a film, a play, etc.) because they, perhaps collectively, hold the promise of making sense of the chaos in our lives. But which stories we choose to tell is important. As British scholar Karen Armstrong states:
“We need myths that will help us to identify with all our fellow-beings, not simply with those who belong to our ethnic, national or ideological tribe. We need myths that help us to realize the importance of compassion, which is not always regarded as sufficiently productive or efficient in our pragmatic, rational world. We need myths that help us to create a spiritual attitude, to see beyond our immediate requirements, and enable us to experience a transcendent value that challenges our solipsistic selfishness. We need myths that help us to venerate the earth as sacred once again, instead of merely using it as a ‘resource’. This is crucial, because unless there is some kind of spiritual revolution that is able to keep abreast of our technological genius, we will not save our planet.”

I hope you will find some inspiration and amusement in the story that we are about to tell. We now invite you to join Percy on the adventure of his young life, as he battles monsters, gods, and his own doubts, in an effort to recover Zeus’s missing lightning bolt, learn who his father is, and discover his own gifts and his life’s purpose. When the Oracle tells him that he must face his destiny, Percy responds with surprise, “I have a destiny?” Well, don’t we all? May the stories that speak to you help you to find and face yours.
