Beginning with our hominin ancestors, artists have always made use of found materials, recovered objects, and their specific qualities to create art. But increasingly, materials for art became subsumed mostly as vehicles for depiction and expression as a means to an end. The singular qualities of the materials of art begin to reassert themselves in the late nineteenth century, not merely coincidentally with the rise of photography. The photograph, so successful in recording the specificity of surfaces, the lighting and chiaroscuro of forms, the “facts” of appearances, allowed a medium like paint to more freely exhibit its inherent qualities, even when used in the service of depiction. (Much of Impressionism was structured and animated by this interplay of the physicality of evident paint and the expression it facilitated.) The introduction of collage in Cubism and the conceptual deployment of found objects in the work of Duchamp et al., brought intense focus on the materials of art as well as the proposition that art no longer needed be as created as it had been. It could be composed of preexisting things, found and repurposed objects, in a new, industrialized world of burgeoning objects of all kinds. The artist’s role in this context was largely that of selector—not unlike a photographer taking a picture—finding or stumbling across the right object to convey an intended meaning, a meaning that very often arose in part from the found object itself, which carried a history of past use and significance that intertwined with its new role as art object. Improvisatory, aleatory or chance methodologies often guided selection of the objects and the creation of these works. Our work in that which remains acknowledges this lineage and these approaches in varying degrees.

2026 Spartan Orientation Staff

Your Nomination = Their Opportunity
HELP US FIND THE NEXT
SPARTAN ORIENTATION STAFF!

We are looking for:

A well rounded group of student leaders to impact, support, and welcome new Spartans and their families to the G.

Nominate a student today at:
go.uncg.edu/sosnomination

New Student Transitions and First Year Experience is looking for motivated student leaders to serve on the 2026 Spartan Orientation Staff!

The Spartan Orientation Staff (SOS) is a group of student leaders who help welcome and orient the new students to UNCG. These leaders are carefully selected and trained during spring in order to be better prepared for the orientation sessions held throughout the year. The success of the orientation program is largely determined by the strength of the SOS, so we look for the best and brightest students (like you!) from across campus to serve. For more information on this position, you can visit our website.

We need your help to find UNCG's best students to serve on the 2026 staff! If you know of any members of your organization or students who you think would excel in this role, nominate them here. When you nominate a member, our staff will reach out to them about learning more and applying.

You can also share information about our upcoming interest sessions! These sessions are a great opportunity to hear from former SOS and learn more about what it's like to be on the staff. Interest session will be taking place at the following times:

- September 18th | 4:00 pm: Virtual Interest Meeting (<https://go.uncg.edu/sosinterestmeeting1>)
- September 24th | 1:00 pm: In-Person Interest Meeting (Dogwood)
- September 29th | 5:00 pm: In-Person Interest Meeting (Azalea)
- October 3rd | 11:00 am: Virtual Interest Meeting (<https://go.uncg.edu/sosinterestmeeting4>)
- October 7th | 2:00 pm: In-Person Interest Meeting (Azalea)

The application opens today, Monday, September 15, 2025, and closes Wednesday, October 15, 2025, at 11:59 PM. For additional information, students can contact New Student Transitions and First Year Experience at 336.334.5231 or Taylor Jones at tnjones8@uncg.edu.
